

CASE STUDY: Study Permit (Restoration / Refusal → Approval)

From Lost Status to Academic Recovery: How VVKARE
Rebuilt a High-Risk Study Permit Case After Refusal

Study Permit – Restoration + New Application Approval

Client: P.D. (London, Ontario)

CASE OVERVIEW

P.D., an international student residing in London (Ontario), faced one of the most stressful situations any student in Canada can experience: his study permit extension was refused, and as a result, he had fallen out of status. This refusal created immediate risks, including potential removal, academic interruption, loss of tuition fees, and ineligibility for future pathways such as the PGWP.

The refusal letter highlighted concerns related to:

- Weak Study Plan / SOP,
- Lack of strong academic progression,
- Inconsistent financial documentation, and
- Insufficient demonstration of ties to the home country.

To make matters worse, P.D. had attempted the extension application with generic templates and unstructured documentation, which significantly weakened his file. After receiving the refusal and discovering he was now out of status, fear and uncertainty overwhelmed him. He urgently needed an RCIC who understood the regulatory framework surrounding IRPR s.182 (Restoration), could reconstruct his academic rationale, and could design a compelling new study permit submission that addressed every deficiency raised by IRCC.

P.D. came to VVKARE Immigration (“VVKARE”) seeking clarity, direction, and expert intervention at a stage where even minor mistakes could lead to long-term consequences on his ability to study, work, or remain in Canada.

VVKARE’S STRATEGIC INTERVENTION

VVKARE approached this case with a dual-strategy model, recognizing that restoration files require exceptional precision, compliance alignment, and a clear demonstration of genuine academic intent.

1. Restoration Eligibility Review & Timeline Assessment

We assessed P.D.’s compliance history, restoration eligibility window, and academic records to ensure the application could be submitted within the regulatory timelines. This included:

- ✓ Verification of refusal date and status lapse
- ✓ Academic transcripts and attendance assessments
- ✓ Program continuation eligibility
- ✓ Review of institutional standing and LOA validity

This helped us establish a legally sound foundation for the restoration request.

2. Rebuilding the Statement of Purpose (SOP)

The previous SOP lacked structure and clarity. VVKARE drafted a new, compelling Study Plan that:

- Explained the academic progression from prior education to the chosen Canadian program,
- Demonstrated the relevance of the program to future career objectives,
- Addressed previous academic inconsistencies through factual, honest reasoning, and
- Highlighted strong ties to the home country supported by verifiable evidence.

The tone, structure, and explanations were aligned with IRCC's study permit assessment criteria.

3. Strengthening Financial & Sponsorship Documentation

VVKARE reorganized the financial package into a cohesive, officer-friendly format:

- ✓ Six-month financial histories
- ✓ Logical explanations for large deposits
- ✓ Sponsor affidavits with supporting income documentation
- ✓ Tuition receipts and GIC statements where required

This eliminated red flags that commonly trigger refusals under financial insufficiency.

4. Securing a New LOA & Academic Alignment

We worked with the Designated Learning Institution (DLI) to obtain a new Enrollment Letter Confirmation, ensuring alignment with the academic plan presented in the SOP.

5. Preparing the Dual Application Package

VVKARE prepared:

- Restoration of Status Request, referencing IRPR restoration provisions, and
- Fresh Study Permit Application, structured as a legally compliant, well-indexed submission.

Each document was framed through an IRCC officer's perspective to eliminate ambiguity and inconsistencies.

THE OUTCOME

IRCC accepted both the Restoration of Status and the new Study Permit. P.D. regained legal status in Canada, avoided removal risk, and resumed his studies without losing his academic term.

The approval transformed what was initially an overwhelming and potentially life-altering setback into a structured, successful recovery. P.D. expressed his gratitude, noting that VVKARE's clear explanations, precise documentation, and strategic approach gave him confidence at a time when he felt his future in Canada was collapsing.

This case demonstrates how a well-crafted, RCIC-led application can restore status, rebuild credibility, and turn a high-risk refusal into a positive immigration outcome.
